EFFECTS OF COLOR AT THE HENLEY RE-GATTA-ENGLISHMEN AS NATURAL WATERMEN.

London, July 8. Yale's gallant struggle and sportsmanlike conduct after decisive but not inglorious defeat I have described in a cable letter. It is hardly secessary to give additional details of the most interesting race of the Henley regatta. But then one has seen the most beautiful water the in the world, the loveliness of the scene, with all its splendid effects of variegated color, munts the memory, and it is not easy to write or talk of anything else. No artist ever attempts m paint the scene at Henley; and it is not easy or a writer to describe it in detail, and to reprogee the spirit of the most popular water carni-al in England; but I find it impossible to resist the temptation to give American readers a few simpses of the bewildering beauty of this gloripicture of outdoor recreation. The Henley course is at all times a picturesque resch of tranquil water. There is a stone bridge at one end, with a church near by, and there sawooded island at the other end, with another church tower on one side. The banks are low, with clumps of trees-oaks, pop'ars and willows-and sloping hillsides in the background. The river flows softly, with hardly a ripple on a still day, and the landscape effects are gentle and restful. This is Henley without the royal blazon of the regatta, which transforms it into the most brilliant scene imaginable. Then the somsolent old town is pulsating with excitement and activity. One bank of the river is med for a mile with houseboats, which are enverted into floating gardens. The open spaces on the other bank are filled with a vast assemblage of light-hearted pleasure-seekers. Wealth and fashion disport themselves in the inclosures of Fawley Court, Clubiand, Isthmian and Phyllis Court. The river is filled for a mile and a carnival of ever changing loveliness and fascinating charm. Every half-hour the bell is rung, and there is scurrying of small boats up and down the river for places inside the line of stakes marked with flags, until the course is cleared. Then the gun is fired, and there are seven or eight minutes of racing, with a flashing glimpse of the crews as they pass. The fotila at once fills up the centre of the river and there is another half-hour of punting and paddling. So the hours pass from early morning until dusk, with languid interest in the rivalries of colleges and oarsmen, but with the pleasurable excitement of a water fête unrivalled for animation and beauty.

HOUSEBOATS AND THEIR DECORATIONS.

The houseboats are tenanted with ladies in bright costumes in harmony with the colors and decorations around them. Here is a white boat with a pretty name, Briar-Rose. The window blinds and curtains are pink, and the deck is bordered with white boxes planted with daisles alternating with jardinieres filled with pink gerantums; and the ladies are dressed in pink and white costumes. Near by is the Genesta. painted brown, with window and deck curtains in white and green, and a white awning underneath which are masses of daisles and geraniums, pink Japanese lanterns and deck chairs fitted with green and white cushions. Another houseboat is pale green, with white window curtains and deck curtains shading to pink. Another is white, with yellow doors and windoa-frames, yellow curtains, and the deck underreath a white awning bordered with lilies and daisies. The lower part of the side of the boat is covered with green branches fastened with yellow rosetter; and the ladles lounging on deck are dressed in yellow and green. and crimson houseboa's have their own decorations and costumes in harmonizing colors. There are a hundred of these floating gardens from Henley Bridge to Temple Island, and each is a ine example of decorative effects in color. Bands music are playing on some of the decks; on others the table is set for luncheon or dinner; and there is a continuous array of masses of flowers from one end of the line of houseboats to

The fleet of thousands of small boats on the river presents a study of color even more brilliant than the houseboats. A favorite color is yellow. The punts are painted yellow, and are furnished with yellow cushions and pillows; and there are yellow flowers in the bow. The ladies in these boats have yellow dresses, and carry white parasols to match the white flannel costumes of the men. Another combination is red and white, the boats being draped with those colors and the occupants dressed in one or the other hue. Red and white flowers complete the color scheme. Many boats are painted brown and have scarlet awnings, while underneath are seen scarlet, vellow and white flowers and costumes. One of the most picturesque boats is a large black gondola, with a gondoller with black trousers, white shirt, red sash and broadbrimmed hat. There are hundreds of blue costumes, for American women are loyal to Yale's tolors, and blue flags are waved from one end of the reach to the other; but white, vellow and bink are the hues which supply the main tones of the picture of the river. Grotesque elements are not lacking. Punts are filled with strolling musicians, with blackened faces, singing to the accompaniment of guitars and violins. Women in scarlet dominoes and masks are singing in canoes. Masked singers in black and white are playing mandolins and sprawling over the bottom of a boat, and a clown is amusing all around him with his jests. The Henley Regatta is a farmless saturnally where folly can be shot as it fles. It is an all-day picnic in the open air, where variety is welcomed as a great gain.

COLOR SCHEMES IN COSTUMES On the river, as well as on the houseboats and in the fashionable inclosures, there are hundreds of dainty and exquisite women's costumes. White dresses are most commonly seen, and are made of every material, from natty duck to bistly lace and muslin. One of the prettiest ftesses on the river is of fine white muslin, Saborately trimmed with narrow black lace inertion, worn over rose pink lining. With this Pes a white straw hat, trimmed with black tells and pink roses. Another levely dress is of ble sea-green tissue with a wide white hat wound with seaweed. One strikingly handsome brunette is dressed in white taffeta with a black stripe, and a hat covered with violets. Color effects are carefully studied beforehand by boating parties. A general color scheme is decided ton, and bont, flowers and costumes are all in torord. For example, four ladies in a punt rear lavender dresses, charmingly diversified a shade and style; and the men with their White flannels have lavender necktles and hatlands. Similar effects are seen in yellow, pale freen, green and scarlet and white.

assessments, punting parties and costumes that the Henley regatta is illumined by the most farled and spleadid effects of color. A more belliant spectacle can hardly be imagined than that presented by the reach of the Thames, with its thousands of boats and tens of thousands of gayly dressed pleasure seekers, and with very conceivable shade of color flashing and parkling under a dull, clouded sky. Yet lighted up most gloriously as was the river yesterday from the old bridge to the island, nature was and to be outdone in decorative effects. A hill-Me at the upper end of the course was affame with the scarlet blaze of thousands of popples frowing wild in the fields. As red was Leander's color, this may have been a portent of coming defeat for Yale, whose men were not theered by a single glimpse of blue sky on the fateful morning; but it was at least a noticeable A BUSY FRESH AIR FUND WEEK. MR. VANDERBILT BETTER. addition to the pageantry of the river.

To spend a day at Henley paddling up and down the river with agreeable companions and entertained by the general spectacle and the languid excitement of the half-hour heats is a most delightful experience. Only half an hour will be required for learning the characteristic features of this annual festival, which are amiability and enjoyment of open-air life. There are races, but nobody takes a deep interest in them, unless an urgent demand be made upon his patriotism by an international contest. There is no betting ring, and professional jealousies and unpleasant controversies are excluded by common consent. Every one wants to enjoy his outing in peace and quiet, and he begins by a virtuous resolution that come what may he will not lose his temper over anything nor give way to the slightest excitement. Hour after hour the boats are running and bumping into one another, but nobody either scolds, or frets, or swears. It is a cheerful, restful, lighthearted holiday, on which grumbling, the most sacred privilege of the irritable Englishman, is the worst possible form

A NATIONAL RECREATION.

A day's experience at Henley helps a stranger to understand why oarsmanship as an art is mastered by Englishmen and why it is so difficult for foreign crews to win victories on the Thames. Boating is one of the most popular recreations in England. Boys take to the water like ducks, and are rowing in good form before they are more than ten or twelve. Women are expert in handling oars or paddles, and love open-air life on the river. Englishmen are natural watermen, and are never happier than they are when paddling on a river. There is hardly a reach of the Thames above Hammersmith Bridge which is not filled with boating partles every fine summer's evening. Accustomed to the management of canoes, punts and skiffs, the holiday crowds swarm into Henley every midsummer and give themselves up to their favorite recreation. Many a boy in his teens was out yesterday or more with a holiday fleet of canoes, punts. In his own canoe or shell, and thousands of or more with and small craft of every kind. It is a women were rowing or punting. It is the river wonderful spectacle, a bewildering revel of color life around London that makes this annual water fête at Henley possible

It is the same river life which gives to English boys their love of aquatic recreation and their training as natural watermen. They begin at an early age, and never lose their taste for rowing. They are good oarsmen when at fourteen they enter the great public schools like Eton, and they are experts when they go up to Oxford or Cambridge, whereas the majority of University oarsmen at American colleges seldom row until they are eighteen. The Eton oarsmen are known as the best recruits for the University crews, be cause they have had years of practice as watermen. If their experience and training tell in their favor when they enter the lists for boating honors in the Universities, why should not the same elements have decisive influence when English oarsmen meet rivals from American Universities, who are not natural watermen?

The sporting critics at Henley have complained since Yale first appeared on the river that the stroke was short; that the men snatched the water at the beginning and bucketed forward with a jerk at the end; that they used their arms but not their legs and bodies, and that they did not allow their boat to run smoothly, but fairly shook it to pieces. With these technicalities I have little sympathy. As athletes the Yale men were superior to their English competitors, but as oarsmen they were inferior, although professing to row in the same general style. They rowed short-yes; but it was mainly in the sense of having a shorter experience and training as watermen. The Leander and New College men rowed a long stroke with many years of practice and river life behind it.

They had taken a cutter belonging to the Indiana and sailed up through the kills, landing first at Elizabethport. Policeman Samuel Lake arrived on the scene and attempted to make an arrest, when he was mobbed by the companions of the man, and it was not until he used his club to good effect that he arrested one of the sailors. While on the way to court one of the men who was in the boat, but who was a civilian, and gave his name as E. W. Smith, of Elizabethport, N. J., puiled a dirk knife and was about to stab the policeman through the back when he was disarmed by a number of citizens.

A hurry call for the reserves was sent, and when they arrived they found the sailors scattered in all directions. Three of them jumped on board of the cutter and were leaving the dock when the police fired several shots, which caused the men to return. They were arrested and were taken before Justice Van Vechten, where they gave their names as Wilson, Foster and Demarest. The four prisoners were locked up in the West Brighton police station for a further hearing to-day. The sixteen other men succeeded in returning to their ship.

STATEN ISLAND HAPPENINGS.

The championship race of the Staten Island Yacht Club, sailed on Saturday, was won by the Madge, Lindemann owner, whose property the cup now is by the right of three successive victories.

The injunction secured by the Staten Island Electric Railroad preventing the New-Brighton Board of Trustees from granting to the Midland Railroad a franchise in Castleton-ave. was argued on Saturday afternoon before Justice Smith in Patchogue. The injunction was dismissed.

On Saturday night the Staten Island Electric Railroad managers, who were laying a connecting switch road managers, who were laying a connecting switch with the Midland company at Port Richmond, were arrested for violation of the Sunday laws. The men, Superintendent Quieg, B. F. Brophy, F. De Trenaltes and Arning S. Prail, were arrested, but were discharged by Justice Muilin, who let them go to restore the road to passable condition.

The trolley situation was badly mixed yesterday at Port Richmond. The Thomas Syndicate ran its cars over the Midland single track from Jewett-ave, to the railroad crossing. The cars of the two lines were constantly coming together, "head on," and the passengers were treated to an exhibition of profamity by the employes, while each crew tried to buildoze the other into retracing its distance. In some instances the passengers walked while the men argued.

TRIBUNE LOCAL OBSERVATIONS

THIRTY-THREE PARTIES SENT TO THE COUNTRY, AND 2.622 MOTHERS AND CHIL-

DREN GET A DAY'S OUTING. The last week has been a busy one for The Tribune Fresh Air Fund. There were thirty-three personally conducted trips to the country, with 1,287 Besides this, there were two day excursions for 2,422 mothers and children. This makes the total for the week 3.719-a week's record not to be despised.

Friday the results of the day's work wer especially encouraging. Six parties left the city In the morning parties were sent to Elienville N. Y.; Claverack, N. Y., and Curtissville, Mass., ag gregating in all eighty-seven children. Four childre, who were invited to Chatham, N. Y., are included in the Curtissville party, and two of the children for Ellenville were specially invited by outsid families. The sixth party of the season for the Ashford Hill Retreat departed in the afternoon and numbered 109 children.

On Friday evening, at the Eric ferry-house, foot of Chambers-st., there was a sight worth see-Over a hundred laughing, expectant little children, each with his bundle of clothes done up in a large newspaper, were assembled in the waiting-room. They were all going to the country, and they knew it. Such shricks and chuckles of de light, such capers and speculations as to the looks and size of the country animals, were never known before. The weighing machine and water fountain took a sudden leap into popularity, and the phonograph was made to sing until it was hoarse. large parties for the country. In one there were the other was made up of thirty-nine for Cambridgeboro, Penn. Along with this party went thirteen lucky children who had special invitations to homes in that part of the country.

The Corning party has been arranged for by th Rev. N. E. Fuller, pastor of the Congregational Church of that place. The figures show the fine results of good, thorough work here. The people have been ready and eager to help slong the charity, and invitations for the little ones have not been acking. In Cambridgeboro the undertaking has been in charge of the Rev. William Grassie, and has met with gratifying success. His efforts have been well seconded, and the thirty-nine little visitors from the city who go there are sure of a joy-

Saturday witnessed the departure of a band of children for the southern part of Pennsylvania There were fifty-four of them, and they were gath ered from all over the city. Leaman Place, Penn., nd vicinity was the destination of forty-eight of them, and the other six were dropped at Gap Sta-They rode in a special car. One car for fifty-four ordinary persons would perhaps be growded, but these little ones had room to spare. ac E. Hershey has arranged for the reception of the children. The people are all anxious to se and do something for the "Fresh Airs," and the have been generous in the extreme with invitations for the little people.

It is hard to conceive what a real blessing these Fresh Air outings are to some of the children They go from wretched, miserable homes, sometimes direct from the clutches of starvation, and at a bound launch out into such fields and woods, such happiness and freedom from care as they ver dreamed of. Once in a while a story of suf fering comes to light. One little girl, who was sent out the other day, was noticed to have several deep scars on her arm. They covered the whole of the rearm, and must have caused terrible suffering. She said she had been crushed between a sofa and the wall. The arm was torn open and dreadfully bruised. According to custom, little attention was paid to the wound, and not until blood-poisoning nad set in, and the little one was almost burning fever, was there any medical assistance What should have been done weeks before wa then tried, and it was only after eight long months in the hospital that the little sufferer could use her arm at all. As one looked at her then, she seemed pale and forlorn and fer from well. And such pale and forlorn and far from well. And such shameful neglect and ignorance are only a part of the sufferings that East Side poverty produces.

The children say many comical things in the country. At one of the homes there was a party strolling through the woods the other day. They came upon a queer-looking leaf, and no one could tell what it was. Many were the guesses, but no one knew. Finally, a very serious, solemn little girl, with brown eyes, spoke. "She knows botany," the rest said. From her definition it might be inferred that she "knew grammar," too.

"It's a com-pound de-clar-a-tive leaf," she announced.

Drs. Swan and Duffield, of the Long Island Hospital, went with the excursion, and during the day they treated a number of sick bables.

Through these two excursions 2,432 mothers and children got a day full of pleasure and of healthful fresh alt.

DEATH OF JOSEPH H. WILLIAMS.

Augusta, Me., July 19.—Ex-Governor Joseph H. Williams died this morning at "Oak Trees," his ome in this city. He was the only son of Ruel Williams and Sarah Lowell Cony. He graduated from Harvard with honors in 1834, and after two from Harvard with honors in ISM, and after two years at Dana Law School, Cambridge, entered the law office of his father. He was admitted to the Kennebec bar in 1837, Mr. Williams was a Demo-crat until 1854, when he abstained from voting that ticket so long as slavery continued to shape the party issues. In 1856 the Republicans elected him to the State Senate. When Governor Hamilin was elected to the United States Senate Mr. Williams became Governor. The next year he returned to the profession of law. In 1862 Governor Washburn appointed him Judge of the State Supreme Court, but owing to the care of the large estate of his father, who had recently died, he was obliged to decline the who had recently died, he was obliged to decline the appointment.

Ex-Governor Williams was the framer of the law refunding the State debt. He was in 1873 elected as an Independent to the Legislature. Last February he received injuries from a fall and did not recover. For forty years he was treasurer of the Cony Female Academy, afterward the Cony High School. He leaves a widow who is the daughter of Sylvester Judd, of Northampton, Mass.

The temperature ranged from 69 to 81 degrees, the average (74% degrees) being 2 degrees to 81 degrees, the average (74% degrees) being 2 degrees below that of Saturday and 1% degrees below that of the corresponding day of last year.

To-day the weather is likely to be threatening, with tight showers in the afternoon.

ENCOURAGING AND GRATIFYING RE-PORTS FROM HIS PHYSICIANS.

HE PASSES THE BEST DAY SINCE HE WAS STRICKEN-PLEASED THAT MR. DEPEW

IS COMING HOME. Cornellus Vanderbilt continued vesterday to improve slowly from the effects of the paralytic stroke which he received last Tuesday morning. The reports, in fact, were more encourage ing than on any day since he was stricken The members of the family, it is understood, are now confident that he will recover, and believe that he will be strong enough to be moved to Newport within two weeks. Dr. McLane sent word to the reporters at 11:30 o'clock that his patient was sleeping at that time. As on the two preceding days, only two bulletins were issued by the physicians in attendance upon the sick man. The first of these appeared at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and the second about twelve hours later. The bulletins read as follows:

10 a. m.-Mr. Vanderbilt passed a comfortable night. His condition remains the same as last

than at any time since his attack on Tuesday.

FEW VISITORS AT THE HOUSE.

There were comparatively few visitors at the house yesterday, as the physicians had assured Mr. Vanderbilt's relatives and friends that there was no immediate danger, and many of them had taken advantage of this assurance to escape from the city over Sunday either to their country homes or for short trips into the suburban districts. Nearly all the members of Mr. Vanderbilt's immediate family, however, were at his home yesterday, and his brothers and sisters, while not remaining in the city, did not go so far away that they could not be called if needed Mrs. William D. Sloane went to Lenox on Friday and spent Sunday there. Mrs. W. H. Vanderbiit and Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard spent the Sunday in town at Mrs. Shepard's home in Fifthave. Mrs. H. McKay Twombly left the city on Saturday and went to her home at Madison, N. J., while Dr. W. Seward Webb and his wife returned to their home at Shelburns Farms, in Vermont.

There was some uncertainty until the last moment as to whether Chauncey M. Depew would return home or not. Before he sailed he was advised of Mr. Vanderbilt's gradual improvement, and told that it would not be necessary for him to cut short his vacation. He per sisted, however, and left England, simply send ing a dispatch that he was on his way here. Mr. Vanderbilt, who has been able to talk with difficulty, was told that Mr. Depew was returning, and he is reported to have been much pleased with the news. While the sick man himself did not think Mr. Depew need come, yet those who were around him knew that if he understood that Mr. Depew was to return at once to pick up the thread of business where Mr. Vanderbilt laid it down, the latter would be much relieved. Such, so it was reported yester day, was the case, and when Mr. Vanderbilt heard that within a few days Mr. Depew would be here, it seemed to remove a load from his mind.

GOOD EFFECT OF THE COOL WEATHER.

W. C. Whitney went to Long Island on Saturday evening, but his son Henry Payne Whitney, remained in town, and, as usual, was onof the earliest callers at the home of his fiancée's father. When he came from the house he said that Mr. Vanderbilt was resting comfortably, and that the unusually cool weather was doing him a great deal of good.

The morning bulletin, as well as the one that was issued in the evening, was signed by only two of the physicians who have been attending Mr. Vanderbilt. It was said by Dr. McLane on Saturday evening that Dr. Delafield and Dr. Janeway would go out of town to spend the Sunday, since Mr. Vanderbilt's condition was so encouraging. They will return probably in time to attend the consultation that is to be held this morning. Dr. McLane has spent every night since Mr. Vanderbilt was stricken in the house of his patient, and last night was no exception. going out of the city for a vacation when he was sent for to attend Mr. Vanderbilt. He left the house for several hours at a time, however, nearly every day. Yesterday he went out soon after noon, and did not return until after 3 o'clock. At that time he said that Mr. Vanderbilt had slept several hours in the course of the day and was still resting quietly. He also said that the friends of the sick man had good reason to be thankful for the continued cool weather and to hope for its continuance. When asked 'f he still held to his opinion of last Friday to the effect that Mr. Vanderbilt, if he continued to improve as he had been doing, could be moved to Newport in about two weeks, Dr. McLane said: "I do not know. As to that I can't tell. Things move very slowly with this disease. We must allow it to take its time."

TOLD IN THE BULLETINS.

Dr. Draper refused to make any statement as to his patient's condition except to say that the bulleting showed his true condition as it appeared to his physicians. At about 2 o'clock in the afternoon Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., came out of the house to go for a walk. He, too, said that his father was resting quietly, and that his condition was such as to give the members of his family the greatest encouragement. The son, as he walked away, limped a triffe, and his face was thin and drawn, and showed unmistakable traces of his recent filness. His brothers, Reginaid and Alfred, did not return to Newport on Saturday, as had at first ben planned. It is possible that they may go to-day. They went out for a stroll together yesterday morning, as also did H. P. Whitney and Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt late in the afternoon.

The Sunday crowd in Fifth-ave, was not so large as usual, but many of those who passed who had read more of Mr. Vanderbilt's illness than their fellows insisted upon telling the ignorant ones all about it.

The fact that only a few doors from the Vanderbilt house, in Fifty-seventh-st., another man is lying ill saved the friends of Mr. Vanderbilt some little annoyance. The man, who is a patient of Dr. Nichols, has been ill for some time, and was much disturbed by the noise made by the workmen who are engaged in renovating the house at Fifth-ave, and Fifty-seventh-st., directly opposite Mr. Vanderbilt's home. In this house Mrs. Paran Stevens lived, but it is at present the property of Hermann Oelrichs, who is having extensive alterations made upon the property. There is considerable iron work being done to complete the improvements, and this was what made most of the noise. As the workmen, after being requested to make less noise in their operations, were still obstreperous, Dr. Nichols got out an injunction against them only a few days before Mr. Vanderbilt was stricken.

DUTIES AT THE GRAND CENTRAL STATION

Much comment was caused yesterday by the statement made by one of Mr. Vanderbilt's closest friends to the effect that Mr. Vanderbilt would never again take upon himself the routine duties entailed upon the executive officer of the great system of which he is the head. A promment railroad man who has been in touch with the Vanderbilt system and who has been much with Mr. Vanderbilt personally, in commenting upon this probable change, remarked yesterday;

"There is an old saw that says that you never miss the water until the well runs dry. So it is with a man who quietly, conscientiously and carefully performs his work. Mr. Vanderbilt is one of that kind of men. Even those who have been intimately associated with him have no accomplished, and when his strong hand is withdrawn the burden will be found to be a heavy one. I have known him year in and year out to come to the offices of the company in the Grand Central Station and work as faithfully and as steadily as a salaried employe. He often stayed long after other officials had left the place, and sometimes was there in the morning before they arrived. He has a wonderful fund of information, and it worried him to allow work to pile up. One salient instance of his devotion to work is shown by his conduct on the Fourth of July last. That day was a legal holiday and the officials and employes of the system did not come to the offices at all. Mr. Vanderbilt, however, arrived at the station early in the day and despite the heat and noise, remained at his desk all day, going over accounts and straightening out matters. He has spent little time in his Newport home, and only went there when he had to do so or to snatch a few hours' much-needed rest."

IN A HIRED CAR.

"Mr Vanderbilt has always been unostentatious, and, while he has always kept a stable full of the best horses and the finest equipages, it has been as a rule for the use of his family, as he usually came to the station in a hired cab. If he had taken the advice of friends some time age, he might not have been prostrated. His trip to California was taken last spring upon the suggestion of his physicians. He was told to go out there for the change and rest. What did he do? He ran special all the way, and in the twentytwo days covered more ground and saw more than any other tourist could see in a year. He even worried an old traveller like Mr. Depew to keep up with him. He absorbed a wonderful amount of information, and then came back and at once plunged into his work harder than ever in order to catch up. He has been warned, but he seemed to have a wonderful capacity for work, and kept continually at it. It has been a severe lesson and a deplorable one, and Mr.

The mission work was begun last February at the request of Mr. Vanderbilt, and is established for the purpose of adding to the spiritual welfare of the porter's and their families employed on the Vanderbilt system.

A ROYAL MEETING PLANNED. P.

EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH AND KING HUMBERT TO HAVE AN INTERVIEW.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S YACHTING TRIP-AN IN-CREASE IN THE GERMAN NAVY PROBABLE.

Berlin, July 19 .- Prince Hohenlohe, Chancellor of Berlin, July 19.—Prince Hohenlohe, Chancellor of the German Empire, who is spending his holidays at his place in Altaussec, Austria, left that place on Tuesday last for Isehi to pay a visit to Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria. The Chancellor and the Emperor had a long interview, which was not shared by any member of the Austrian Ministry, St. Thomas's Church being closed for repairs, funeral the Emperor had a long interview, which was not shared by any member of the Austrian Ministry, St. Thomas's Church being closed for repairs, funeral the first star points of the st. Since then it has transpired that communications have been exchanged between the Governments at Vienna and Rome in regard to a meeting between | Fur Emperor Francis Joseph and King Humbert, to ake place in the autumn after the former receives the Italian Ministry will be associated with these interviews. The French view of the situation that the Marquis Visconti-Venosta, the new Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, is less favorable to a continuance of the Dreibund than was his predecessor, and that the policy of Signor Luzzatti, the new Italian Minister of the Treasury, will include a commercial treaty with France, do not coincider with the official opinion here, which is based upon advices from Rome. According to these advices, instead of tending to opposition to the Triple Alliance, the newly constructed Ministry of the Marquis di Rudini is stronger in favor of the Dreibund than was the former Ministry.

Although Signor Luzzatti takes office pledged to provide a full military budget, there is reason to believe that communications are proceeding between the Governments at Ro lin in regard to the Italian military economies, in which the other Dreibund Powers are interested, and it is probable that the projected interviews between the monarchs will have reference thereto

Emperor William is spending the most of the time of his tour of the northern waters in yachting in the Bergen flords. His majesty has experienced much bad weather thus far on his trip. Kaiser was visiting Stoltheim he went up the flord in a smail boat, and then with a single companion took a long excursion on foot, viewing the fails and other sights. The evenings on board the Hohenzollern have been spent in the performance of short comedy pieces, with concerts and readings. It is now fixed that the Kaiser will return to Wilhelmshaven on August 5, when, with the Empress, he will start for Wesel to unveil the statue of Emperor William I at that place on August 6, From Wesel they will visit Essen as the guests of Krupp, the great German gunmaker, for which visit great preparations are being made by the Krupps and the local authorities. The Emperor will then Join his family at Wilhelmshohe, and on August 9 will go to Baden for the seventieth birthday of the Grand Duke of Baden. A report of doubtful authenticity has been in circulation that the heads of the Federal States have given their assent to the Emperor's asking the Grand Duke of Baden to assume the title of King, with a union of the Grand Duchy of Baden and the Reichsland. When the question of linking the Grand Duchy of Baden with the Reichsland was seriously discussed some years ago the heads of the Federal States were unanimous in declaring against the proposal. Admiral Hollmann, the head of the Ministry of the Imperial Navy, accompanied by the members of the Marine Budget Committee of the Reichslang, one of whom was Dr. Lieber, the leader of the Centrist party in the Chamber, has inspected the arsenals and forts at Kiel, Wilhelmshaven and other places. This inspection is regarded as preliminary to an increase in the strength of the German Navy, Dr. Lieber, upon his return to Berlim, said that the Centrists would now know the limit of the naval expenditures.

The Agricultural Congress, which will meet at Budapest on September 17, will discuss, at the request of the Hungarian Government, the questions of the establishment of a sliver currency, the destrability of an international agreement and the ratio of the metals.

MR. BRYCE ON ARBITRATION.

London, July 19 .- "The Daily News" to-morrow rill publish an interview with the Right Hon. James Bryce, M. P., the author of "The American mmonwealth," on the subject of Anglo-American arbitration. Mr. Bryce's views on the question are optimistic. He says that the dispatches exchanged by Lord Salisbury and Secretary of State Oney show that each side is sincerely desirous of an agreement that will be satisfactory to both. bury, he holds, is over-cautious, and has raised needless difficulties. Mr. Bryce further said that he is in favor of submitting territorial disputes to the decision of an arbitration court. He approves the proposal for an appointment of a joint commis-sion to settle the Angio-Venezuelan boundary dis-

THE FIRST BAYREUTH PERFORMANCE.

Bayreuth, July 19.-There was a large assemblage, including many Americans, present to-day at the Festspielhaus to witness the production of "Das Rheingold," in the first cycle of Wagner's tetralogy, "Der Ring des Nibelungen." There was also a large crowd on the hill on which the Festspielhaus is located, all its members eager to see the arrival of the prominent people who attended the performance. cast was as follows: Wotan, Carl Perron, of
